In this wonderful parody from 1940, W.C. Fields announces his candidacy for America's highest office. He offers sound advice on a number of topics in classic Fields-style humor in his attempt to win votes. "Campaign resolutions are no better than New Year's resolutions," he writes. "They are thrown together hastily at the last minute, with never a thought as to how they may be gracefully broken. Now, I am a candidate with years of experience breaking New Year's resolutions, and what I can accomplish with those, I can certainly accomplish with campaign resolutions."

Perfectly qualified for this racket

By Gunjan Saraf

W.C. Fields was busy juggling all over the world at the age when he should have been in school. However Fields educated himself with a dictionary, several different varieties of readers and books on grammatical construction.

In this book he juggles with words and tells us why he is the most suitable candidate for President with lines like ...

"The major responsibility of a President is to squeeze the last possible cent out of the tax payer; thus he should be at least familiar with the intricacies of the ransom notes that the Internal Revenue Department sends out each spring."

"If the chief executive is not an expert in the art of making resolutions, how can he hope to break his campaign promises gracefully."

"If he knows nothing else, a President should at least understand the secret of success in the business world."

For, after all, what is the Presidency but a glorified business - or, at least, a fine racket?"

Naturally he highlights his own expertise in these matters and winds up with ...

"Remember, folks, cast a vote for Fields and watch for the silver lining. Cast several votes for Fields and watch for the police."

He's got my vote!

By Harry Lime

Hey, he's got my vote! This is just in time for the 2016 elections This is a very funny book but as always with WC, there is a great deal of truth behind his humor. If Donald Trump doesn't make you laugh, this book certainly will.
